

Terwilliger, Hall and Brackett Recognized in Who's Who Legal: Investigations 2019 Rankings

November 28, 2018

McGuireWoods partners George J. Terwilliger, Matthew Hall and Alex Brackett are recognized among the world's top government investigations lawyers in the upcoming Who's Who Legal: Investigations 2019.

The annual report is based on recommendations from clients and peers and on independent research by Global Investigations Review and Who's Who Legal. Honorees will be profiled in print and online versions of Who's Who Legal: Investigations 2019 to be published in February.

Terwilliger and Brackett are members of McGuireWoods' highly regarded Government Investigations & White Collar Litigation Department, which ranks among the world's premier practices in Global Investigations Reviews GIR 100 guide.

Terwilliger is one of Washington, D.C.'s most sought-after attorneys for bet-the-company corporate investigations and high-profile white-collar defense cases. He spent 15 years in the U.S. Department of Justice, starting as a law clerk and concluding his service as acting attorney general. He now co-leads McGuireWoods' white-collar practice and the firm's Strategic Risk & Crisis Management Group.

Hall is an antitrust and competition lawyer who practices in London and Brussels. He is experienced in all areas of European Union and United Kingdom competition law and counsels multinational clients on trade agreements and practices. He serves as vice chair of the American Bar Association Section of Antitrust Law's International Committee for 2018-2019 and he is a frequent speaker at seminars, conferences and training sessions on competition and antitrust law and regulatory topics.

Brackett was named to Who's Who Legal's "Future Leaders" list honoring top investigations lawyers ages 45 and younger. Based in Richmond, Virginia, Brackett co-leads the Strategic Risk & Crisis Management Group. He has handled numerous internal investigations for large corporate clients and defended them in criminal and regulatory investigations into alleged healthcare, mortgage and financial fraud, environmental crimes, bribery and violations of export control laws.

Respected, independent authorities have repeatedly recognized McGuireWoods for its white-collar litigation prowess. The firm holds a nationwide ranking for corporate investigations and white-collar criminal defense in The Legal 500 United States. The National Law Journal has honored three of the firm's government investigations and white-collar lawyers, including Terwilliger, as litigation "Trailblazers."
